Fall fests provide fun for Families

Pat Young
Frontline Staff

Fall is underway and local communities and organizations are taking the opportunity to thank people for their support by holding festivals.

One of the events visited by Soldiers, Family and community members was Taylors Creek Elementary School's annual fall fest Oct. 20.

The event gave students and community members opportunities to relax and enjoy with features that included pony and horse rides, an inflatable slide, cake walks, arts and crafts, more games than you could shake a stick at, and a martial arts demonstration.

Col. Thomas James, 4th Brigade Combat Team commander, and his Family visited the event and took time out to express thanks to the school and community members for their steadfast support of Soldiers and their Families. There were also a number of Soldiers from the 3rd Sustainment Brigade lending a helping hand and having fun too.

Spc. Jason Strickler, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Sustainment Bde. helped out at the event, even though his own children don't attend Taylors Creek.

"It is good to come together and do something for the children," Strickler said. "It feels good to help. Anything for the kids."

Spc. Jeff Atenta, 24th Finance, shared Strickler's view on the need to help children, and operated a ping-pong toss awarding prizes to all participants.

First sergeant Antonio Brown, HHC 92nd Chemical Company, said the Soldier support was part of the ongoing partnership 3rd Sustainment Bde. had with the school.

"We sponsor Taylors Creek Elementary and help by providing assistance where we can," Brown said. "On Tuesday and Thursdays two to four Soldiers come out here to read stories or tutor children."

Brown said although the fest was one of the first big events for the school, it wasn't their last, even though their assistance was limited due to the ongoing deployments.

One of the big attractions at the event was a demonstration put on by the World Martial Arts Academy, which had Tae-Kwon-Do students performing feats of martial skills. The students performed choreographed patterns called poomses, performing precise moves, high flying kicks with board breaking.

If you missed the excitement of the Taylors Creek Elementary Fall Fest, there is still time to enjoy fall activities with the Directorate of Morale Welfare and Recreation Fall Fest at Newman Field on Nov. 3. Event coordinators promise something to do for the whole Family including games, sack races, inflatable slide, climbing wall and the ring toss. Other attractions include teen activities, a disc jockey, food vendors and more.

Another event that compliments the fall fest is the Fort Stewart Officers' Spouses Club annual holiday bazaar Nov. 3 at Club Stewart. The bazaar, according to coordinators, will have a wide variety of vendor, and includes the Holiday Café providing sweet treats and lunch items available for purchase. Club Stewart will be festively decorated and holiday music will fill the air. There will be a $1 admission fee for those over 12 years of age and all proceeds will go to the Fort Stewart OSC welfare fund. The bazaar is open to the public.

For those wanting to enjoy both the MWR fest and the baazar, transportation has been provided to shuttle between the events. But the fun doesn't stop there, according to Sarah Parrish, Mayor of South Bryan Village. The installation mayors will host a Trunk-or-Treat event 6-8 p.m. Oct. 31 at the Hunter Club parking Lot and Newman Field at Stewart.

The mayors invite the military community to enjoy Halloween in a safe, fun and friendly environment. The event is sponsored by community mayors and Amy Community Services. The event provides an alternative to handing out candy from the trunk of decorated vehicles. Prizes will be awarded for best adult and child's costume, decorated vehicle and carved pumpkin.

Advanced vehicle registration is required. People can register at the Family Readiness Center, building 87, Lindquist Ave., Fort Stewart. For more information, call ACS at 767-1257 at Stewart, or 315-6816 at Hunter.

AFTB program welcomes new members, schedule classes

Kara Casto
Frontline Staff

Army Community Service at Hunter Army Airfield welcomed two new Army Family Team Building program members last week. Lisa Gheno-Cuevas accepted the role of volunteer program manager and Yolanda Hingel, mobilization and deployment specialist, will provide support services to the AFTB program.

Hingel previously worked with Family Morale, Welfare and Recreation in Virginia. She recently joined the Army Community Services mobilization and deployment program at Hunter.

"My number one priority is to provide quality service to the students and instructors in AFTB. We want to make everyone aware of the program, and make sure they can utilize and benefit from the information we give them," Hingel said. The biggest benefit of AFTB, she said, is knowledge. "You find out what's available to you, and become self-supporting."

Volunteer Program Managers donate their time to manage the AFTB program. The program is designed to help the Army community learn, grow, and lead.

"In AFTB, we meet community needs for information," said Gheno-Cuevas. "We provide tools to manage Family Readiness Groups, manage meetings, and to recruit, retain and recognize volunteers. In the advanced classes, we provide group leaders the tools and information they need to mentor volunteers and employees, and to communicate with the media."

Gheno-Cuevas is a long-term AFTB volunteer. She attended Level I of AFTB training during the first year of the program and has been active ever since. She completed the Instructor Training Course and helped build the AFTB program at West Point, New York. Soon after, she became the Volunteer Program Manager, a position she has filled at multiple installations.

She later completed the Master Trainer Course and spent four years as a Core Instructor, conducting Master Trainer Courses and writing program materials. Many AFTB instructors are military spouses, according to Hunter ACS Director, Monica Battle.

"We have spouses teaching who have been in the military and experienced spouses, who can share their stories, and tell the new spouses that it will be okay," Battle said.

Spouses and Family members are better equipped to cope with deployments when they are educated about military life, she added.

"It is important for them to get information and learn about the military. AFTB helps prepare Families for military life by giving them real-life solutions," she said.

Upcoming AFTB classes at Hunter include Level I, which covers Army basics such as reading a Leave and Earnings Statement, chain of command, and military acronyms and terms. The class is scheduled for Oct. 29-30. Hunter will also offer an AFTB instructor training course January 23-25.

All AFTB classes are free, and childcare is available for selected courses. For more information, contact Hunter ACS at 315-6818 or 767-1257 at Fort Stewart.

HEALTH MATTERS

Winn Army Community Hospital

Early detection: fighting breast cancer

Winn Public Affairs

Breast cancer is the most common cancer in women, aside from skin cancer. Mammography screenings are women's best chance for early breast cancer detection.

To find breast cancer early, the National Cancer Institute recommends that women in their forties and older should have mammograms every one to two years. Many organizations encourage yearly mammograms. If there are risk factors for breast cancer, screenings should begin earlier. Clinical breast exams by a health care provider should also be done on a regular basis, as well as performing monthly self-exams and reporting any breast changes.

Mammography is an x-ray picture of the breast. Women who still have menstrual cycles should schedule a mammogram one week after menstrual cycle, as the breast will be less tender for the exam. Women should avoid using deodorant and lotions on the day of the mammogram. A specially trained technologist will perform the mammogram and take various views of the breasts. Two flat services will compress the breast for a few seconds. Compression is necessary to produce the best picture while using the lowest amount of radiation possible. Often analgesics such as Motrin or Tylenol will relief discomfort that some women experience with mammography.

Women should be aware as one ages, the risk of breast cancer increases. The risk becomes especially higher for women age 60 or older. Any personal history of breast cancer or breast disease may predispose women to develop breast cancer again. The risk also increases if there is a family history of breast cancer for a woman whose mother, sister, daughter, or two or more close relatives have had the disease. Some individuals may be born with an altered genetic gene that is recognized for regulating breast cell growth, which becomes an "inherited" risk for developing breast cancer.

Some other risks involve factors related to estrogen regulation with early menstruation, having no children, first pregnancy after the age of 35, and use of hormone replacement therapy. However, there are life style choices that can be modified to reduce risks for breast cancer. These are choosing a balanced diet, high in fiber and low in saturated fats, getting plenty of exercise, no tobacco use, and discretion with alcohol use.

Army Values: Integrity means doing the right thing, more

Chap. (LT. Col.) William Ralston
Installation Chaplain

The story is told that when Abraham Lincoln was a shopkeeper, early in his life, he accidentally over-charged a customer a few pennies. Later in the day, he realized the error, and walked several miles to return the pennies. Mr. Lincoln understood the value of integrity, and was known as "Honest Abe."

The word, integrity, comes from a Latin word meaning "whole" and "complete."

It has to do with the correspondence between what a person believes, what he says, and what he thinks. The idea is that one's actions are faithful to the person's belief system.

What does all this mean to us? It means "doing the right thing." People of integrity "do the right thing." They choose right over wrong, good over evil, honesty over dishonesty. They put their actions where their mouth is. They are even willing to walk several miles to return a few pennies, if the situation calls for it.

As Soldiers, we are called upon to be faithful to the Army values and the Soldier's Creed. Integrity means saying what we believe and then living out our values. It is the harmony among what we believe, what we say, and what we do. In a very real sense, integrity is the Army value that is the "glue" that holds all the other six Army values together.

Integrity is also evidence of the existence of god.

C.S. Lewis was a great advocate for the Christian faith. When he was asked to give evidence that there was, in fact, a god, he told the story of the "man on the bus." The man was sitting on the bus and he stood up for a moment to check his bag on the rack above him. As he stood up, another man sat down where he had been sitting. The first man said, "Excuse me, you took my seat. I was sitting there. I just stood up to check on my luggage."

Now we would all say that it is wrong to take someone's seat, and the proper thing would be to return the seat to the original owner. Whatever culture a person comes from, whatever background a person comes from, it is wrong to take something that belongs to another. It is right to respect the property of another. This idea that "it is wrong to steal" which is recognized in every society, is an evidence that there are absolutes in our world. And if there are some ideals that are absolute, there must be an "Absolute" with a capital "A." And the greatest, highest Absolute, would be god.

Once you decide there is a god, then you begin to explore who God is.

Goyers, The Invisible, out on DVD, reviewed

Commentary by:
Sasha McBrayer
Fort Stewart Museum

David S. Goyer is a great fan and collaborator in the genre of comic book feature film. He has had his hands in the new "Batman Begins" franchise, with its second chapter due out next year in the form of "The Dark Knight". Goyer also had minimal authorship in various incarnations of Blade, whose character "Whistler" was a Goyer original so highly liked as to be added to the comic books afterward.

Today Goyer's name is of note because of "The Invisible", which is now out on DVD. Goyer directed the hip thriller, produced by the same team as Shyamalan masterwork "The 6th Sense". The film has an M. Night mood, without the surprise ending.

Invisible has a great soundtrack, if not one that becomes too pop influenced in a clinch. Still, key scenes are completely heightened by spectacular cinematography and visuals of ghostly rising patches of fog on backdrops of the gargantuan Vancouver evergreens, contrasted by the posh art house architecture of the wealthy. These mesh well with great music from bands like alternative rockers "Kill Hannah".

The story of "The Invisible" has some depth and originality to it that came as a pleasant surprise. It is almost a Romeo and Juliet story in reverse. What if one killed the other first, and then out of guilt and remorse, one learned more about the deceased, and even felt the presence of his ghost? It sounds cheesy, but it works and there are enough angles and different dimensions at play to make it work.

The star of the film is 25 year old Justin Chatwin who is the recently "deceased" high schooler dreaming of leaving home and his unfortunate past to become a writer. One misunderstanding and a couple of violent attacks later, he is left for dead and invisible to the world as he travels through it. He recognizes quickly that he is in limbo and still clinging to life. If only he could lead someone to find his body he might have a chance to live again.

Here is where the originality comes. Chatwin's character does not choose his mother or best friend or even a girlfriend to haunt into discovering his body. Instead he discovers an uncanny connection to his killer — a remarkable female character brought to life by beauty Margarita Levieva. As the black clad, uncommonly tough delinquent "Annie", Levieva becomes a strong, troubled character the likes of which are rarely seen on film. The audience wants to hate her until a great scene where the sleek gothic killer suddenly breaks out, revealing long, fair colored tresses in a crescendo of violent dance within the world of a volcanic rave. This is where Annie becomes human and even her victim, the ghost, starts to appreciate her.

Chatwin is loved by the camera. He is stylish and believable enough. Levieva is intriguing and Marcia Gay Harden as the mother lends grit to the tale. Overall it's an entertaining, great to watch picture, but lacks anything that really electrifies.
